Firestone Building Products Continue

Firestone is not willing to sign the DFCM Warranty Forms. They have the following issues with these documents.

Bituminous Roofing:

- a. Pg. 2 language says that Firestone "will maintain said roof in water tight condition free from leaks arising from such causes." Firestone as a manufacture, is not sible to promise that the roof will be free from leaks. Our promise is to repair leaks covered by the warranty.
- b. Pg. 2 language in Inclusions #1 appears to be contradictory (or at least confusing) in that under inclusions, metal incorporated into the roof system is not coverec
- c. Pg. 2 language "and such damage as may result from application of these materials" implies that the manufacturer is responsible for consequential damages. Under Exclusions #3, damage to the building and contents are excluded. Therefore, what is the intent of this language?
- d. Pg. 3 language in inspection and repair, #3 is acceptable provided that the phrase: "provided such repairs do not further damage the roofing system" is included. This is to prevent the Owner from using incompatible materials and then expecting the manufacturer to repair the larger area. within the scope of the guaranty. It is assumed this means repair of leaks, which should have beer reported to the manufacturer absent any inspection.

2. Single Ply Roofing

- a. Where the language is the same, the same issues apply as were identified on the Bituminous Guaranty.
- b. Pg. 2 language that the manufacturer "has determined that the required quantities of roofing materials have been used" is unclear.
- c. Pg. 2 language that "roofing materials have been applied in conformance with the contract documents" should be changed to read "in conformance with the manufacturer's requirements.
- d. Pg. 2 language under Inclusions #2 clearly requires replacement of damaged materials. It does not say that this pertains to leaks covered by the warranty; it says any leakage or failure of the roof membrane assembly. This could be construed to mean that even if the owner damages the membrane, the manufacturer is still responsible for the removal and replacement of damaged insulation and other materials. This needs to be clarified and if replacement is the intent, the cost of the warranty will be greater than Firestone's normal warranty changes.
